THE WATCHUNG RIDGE: Legend and reality.

Stretching from Paterson to Pennsylvania, the mighty Watchung Ridge has had a long and colorful past. From prehistoric times to the modern day, the ridge has been associated with intrigue and subversion. How appropriate then, that WFMU's transmitter and antenna now rest atop these same Jersey alps, giving the station the wide coverage area it presently enjoys.

During the American revolution, General George Washington is said to have surveyed British troop movements from one of its lofty peaks.

While wandering among the Watchung Ridge on the cold night of November 23rd, 1986, Mr. D. Andreana of Brooklyn, NY claims to have spotted the Jersey Devil frolicking on the mountain tops. Skeptics say it was a hallucination brought on by an overexposure to freeform radio. But they fail to explain the plaster cast of the Devil's footprint, now on view in the main foyer of The Bowling Museum in Secaucus, NJ.

1987: WFMU's brand new transmitter kicks out 1,440 watts of raw, blistering power from the ice capped peaks of the First Mountain in West Orange. About half of WFMU's listeners are in New York City, the other half in Northern New Jersey, with pockets of the faithful in Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Westchester, NY and the Jersey shore. These listeners provide WFMU with 100% of its operating budget. No college support. No underwriting. No grants. Just grateful listeners. And a rich heritage.

-David Newgarden, Chief Historian & Music Director
